

PG.dip in International Trade & Maritime Law (1 Year Distance Learning)

SOLENT UNIVERSITY

Introduction:-

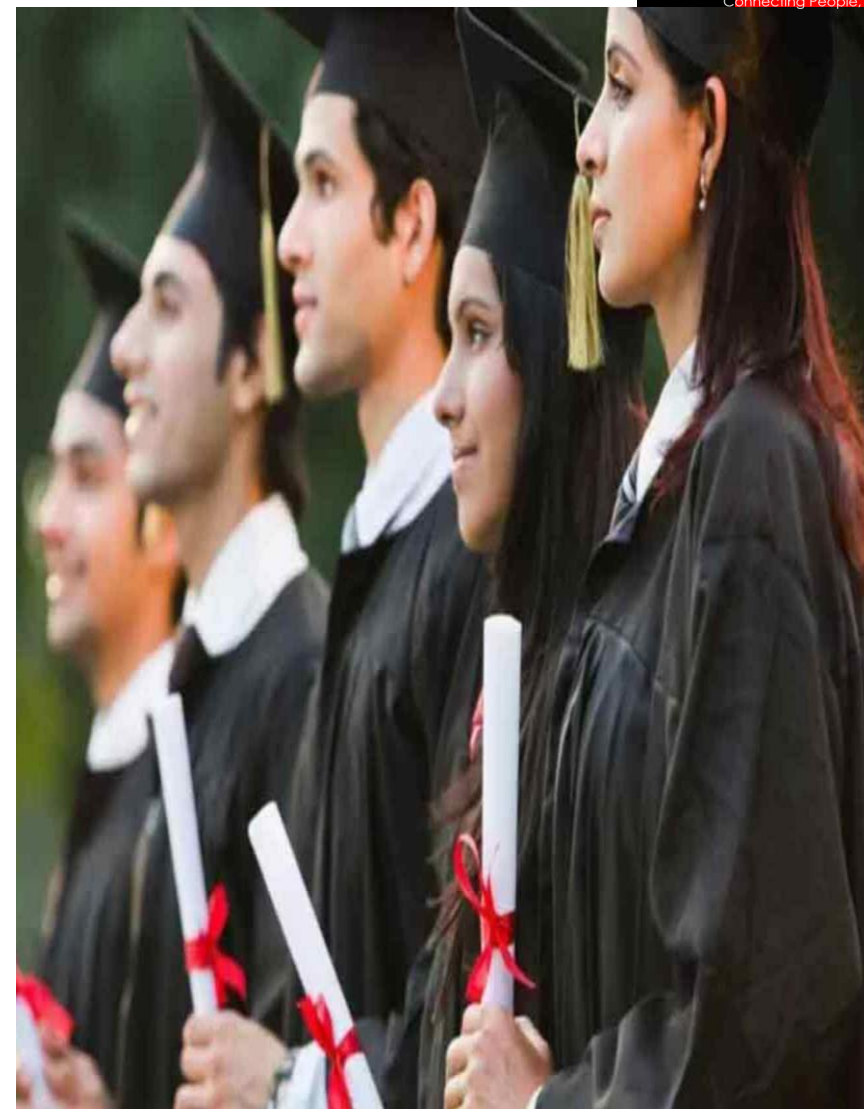

Specifically designed to meet the demands of the shipping industry, the course delivers essential knowledge of the legal frameworks at the heart of shipping claims, disputes and commercial relationships.

Exploring how marine disputes and liabilities are investigated and managed, you will develop detailed understanding of this complex, specialised branch of the law. You will be equipped to advise on the merits of claims, and to communicate effectively with legal practitioners. You will also develop the professional grounding to apply that knowledge in the practical industry, and the analytical, critical thinking, and problem-solving skills to respond with legal analysis of the challenges arising in the international trade industry.

Core modules

➤ Introduction to English Law

The course is based on English law, which is a common law system of law. About 90% of the world's trade is concluded on contracts governed by English law, which makes it the most relevant choice of law for the shipping industry.

➤ International Sale of Goods

This module will introduce you to the first part of the legal 'shipping picture' of which the entire course is comprised.

➤ Carriage of Goods by Sea

The module introduces you to the topics of bills of lading and charter parties. These two topics together form the backbone of the carriage of goods by sea.

Core modules

➤ Admiralty and Marine Insurance

This module will introduce students to the 'bigger picture' of the shipping liabilities that surround the international sale and carriage contracts studied in the previous two modules.

➤ Marine Dispute Management

This module rounds off the course with a focus on how claims are brought and the underlying considerations which must be faced in the management of dispute resolution.

Accreditations:-

Times Higher Education Most Improved Student Experience Award

In 2015 the University won the Most Improved Student Experience Award at the Times Higher Education Awards. The award is based on student votes from the Times Higher Education's Student Experience Survey, where up to 20,000 students are polled by a specialist student market research agency to rate academic reputation, teaching, social life and facilities of their universities.

Chartered Institute of Public Relations (CIPR) regional PRide Community Relations award

In November 2017 Solent's Showcase Gallery's Small Faces Exhibition won the CIPR regional PRide Community Relations award. The exhibition saw over 7,000 postcard sized self-portraits drawn by people of all ages and walks of life – from 2 to 92 – and every submission was displayed.
